

"Da 'Eavy Metal ladz 'ave got demselves a Gorkamorka campaign goin', If dey get da buggies finished dat is!"

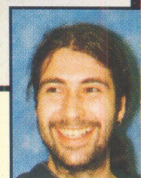

Martin Footitt: I can fit lots of Orks in a Trukk but Traks are cheaper. So why not just put tracks on a Trukk model? It looks great with extra bashed up armour plates and the extra wheels as well. The turret on the front is for a Scorcha, when I get round to making it that is!

Richard Baker: My idea is a lot like Martin's, a big Trak with a Scorcha – sorted! After a few games I hope to get some armour plates for it too. I've got an Ork army for Warhammer 40,000 so its been great fun getting into Gorkamorka.

Ben Jefferson: I've made a lot of Ork buildings recently out of plasti-card so it's been really easy to make my big Trukk. My mob don't have a fort as they prefer to move around a lot, hence all the gubbins attached to the vehicle.

Adrian Walters: The Trukk model just isn't big enough for my taste so I've extended the back out a bit. My mob is going to be mostly Bikes with the Trukk to carry my Nob about. It'll also have lots of Grotz in it for picking up scrap.

Rich Potter: I really like Brian Nelson's Orks so I'm using a lot in my mob. I like them so much I've even stuck metal torsos onto plastic legs.

Jim Butler: Most of the lads have had the same idea when putting together their mob. Each mob has lots of boyz driving around in a really large vehicle. My mob only took a few hours to paint, I wanted to start playing as soon as possible. Da boyz are ready to rumble so hurry up ladz, I'm waiting for ya!
